

FLOWER RANGE

diana-ware presents...

Flower Power epitomizes a period of civil unrest, notably in the USA, that spawned a counterculture characterized by youth, clothing styles, sexual freedom, natural foods and herbal remedies. Started in the 60's focussing on political activism, it is alive and well today. However these days it has metamorphed more into environmental concerns as the central issue.

The legacy of this counterculture is a mindset of peace, live and let live, and freedom from oppression. The term flower power is often attributed to the writings by Allen Ginsberg (1926-1997) who vigorously opposed militarism, economic materialism and sexual repression, winning the Lifetime Literary Achievement Award for his work. The term flower power has come to symbolize love and peace as the only legitimate agency for social change. The diana-ware flower range celebrates this sentiment.

Consistent with the Flower Power theme, only natural fibres are used for the making of the flower range... and 100% Cotton fibre feels good on your skin.

To preserve our precious environment we have used a special dye to reduce the use of harsh chemicals. Simply cold-wash separately, dry in shade, is all that's needed.

The comfort comes from the shearing waist of generous width to flatten and flatter. The loose fitting legs are airy and great for our climate. Pants have pocket in the front. Sides have draw strings that can be pulled up to give that carefree characteristic flick on each side.

Hand made crocheted flowers at random complete the picture together with the scrunched-up look cleverly combining laissez faire and savoir faire.
